

Hillary Borough Hall

A woman at the Borough Hall subway station asked me directions to the R train and I told her she needed to walk across the overpass, down the stairs, to the end of the platform, take a left through a long tunnel where she would find the 2/3 platform that she could follow to the opposite end, hang a left and a right, up the stairs, passed the other turnstiles, follow the sign, down a hallway, down a staircase, down another staircase and then she would arrive at the Court Street R train platform. This is all, of course assuming she doesn't bypass walking through the whole subway system, turn around and exit before re-swiping at the other entrance across the street. She laughed and said, "wow that's complicated." I smiled and said, "yeah I know."
